MORE INDICTMENTS HAVE BEEN FOUND

Grand Jury Adjourns Until Monday; Miley Goes to Capital.

It was reported yesterday that the grand jury has returned forty more indictments and witnesses were still being examined. It is said that none of the indictments are for city or county officials, but are for the alleged violators of the gambling and prohibitory laws only.

Three more alleged proprietors of gambling houses and bootlegging establishments were arrested yesterday on indictments returned by the grand jury. They are Ben Green, one of the alleged proprietors of the Metropolitan, and James T. Jones and Bert H. McLaughlin, said to have been operating a gambling house and disposing of liquor at the Central drug store.

There were nine counts against Green and eight against Jones and McLaughlin. Bonds in the amount of $10,000 was furnished by each of the three for their appearance in court when their trials are called. It is probable they will be arraigned some time Monday.

The total number of arrests due to indictments by the grand jury has been brought up to fifteen, J. Allen and Charles Overton being the other two.

The grand jury adjourned yesterday until 9 o'clock Monday morning. Assistant Attorney General J. H. Miley, who is conducting the investigation, returned to Oklahoma City and will not return until the investigation is under way again.

It is not believed that any other indictments were returned yesterday, but those found by the grand jury probably be turned over to the employees of the district court so that the warrants may be prepared for the sheriff's office to serve.

E. P. Turner, J. T. White and E. R. Perkins of Dallas, who are among the promoters, have submitted a proposition to citizens of Bowie for a cash bonus of $2,000. Bowie is in Montague county, which lies just over Red river from Jefferson county, Oklahoma.

A Remedy For All Pain

"The efficiency of any drug," says Dr. C. P. Robbins, "is known by the results obtain from its use. It is able to control pain and disease by means of any prescription. One of the principal symptoms of all diseases is pain, and this is what the patient most often applies to us for, i. e., something to relieve his pain. If we can arrest this promptly, the patient is most liable to trust in us for the other remedies which will effect a permanent cure. One remedy which I have used largely in my practice is Anti-kamnia Tablets. Many and varied are their uses. I have put them to the test on many occasions, and have never been disappointed. I found them especially valuable for headaches of malarial origin, where quinine was being taken. They appear to prevent the bad after-effects of the quinine. Anti-kamnia Tablets are also excellent for the headaches from indigestion, also for headaches of a neuritic origin, and especially for women subject to painful catamenial times. Two Anti-kamnia Tablets give prompt relief and in short time the patient is able to go about as usual. These tablets may be obtained at all druggists. Ask for A-K Tablets. They are guaranteed for headaches, neuritis and all pains."

BUTTERFLIES HAVE TONGUES

When Not in Use Are Coiled Like a Watch Spring.

Of all the marvels of which the world of insect life is so teeming, none is more curious and remarkable than the tongue of the butterfly. This is always of great length. When not in use it is coiled like a watch spring in a flat spiral close to the head. But when the butterfly visits the flower on which it feeds the tongue is uncoiled, the tip inserted deep in the heart of the flower and the juices sucked up.

The butterfly's tongue really consists of two tubes. Each of these has a coiled inner face, whose edges interlock one with the other, so as to form a third or central tube.

In butterflies we have the highest development of the insect race so far as beauty is concerned. In other respects, however, they do not hold so high a place. They are out-ranked in intelligence by ants, bees and wasps, and in perfection of external parts and mechanical excellence of the joints by beetles.

To poets, painters and moralists the butterfly has long been the most interesting member of the insect world. Their imaginations were excited by the marvelous evolution of this magnificent flower from a "disgusting worm," whose sole concern in life was the gratification of an insatiable appetite.

In this was seen a picture of man, groveling and of the earth earthling, who when his span of eating and drinking was over, would lie down in his grave, from which in due course his soul escaped, just as the butterfly did from its chrysalis.

The colors and patterns on the wings which make butterflies so beautiful are due to the arrangement of innumerable scales that can be distinguished only with a powerful microscope. In some cases these scales are themselves colored, and in others they are colorless, but reflect the effect of color by optical effect, due to the reflection of light from the delicate ridges on each scale.—Pittsburg Post.

EXTINGUISHING COTTON FIRE

Kerosene Used to Put Out Burning Bale.

What would you think if you got a hurry-up call for kerosene to put out a fire? Probably you would expect a repetition of the order, thinking you had not heard aright, and when it was repeated without change you would feel justified in concluding that some one was mentally off balance or attempting a practical joke. But that was not the case. You never lived in Caliche, Cal., the metropolis of Imperial valley, and by the same token knew nothing about cotton in the bale.

Exactly such a rush order as this under discussion recently went out from the cotton yard at Caliche to the Standard Oil company station at the same place. Now the Standard man in charge knew a lot about kerosene, and something about cotton, so he saw to it that the order was filled with all possible speed. Due to a poor market the Caliche cotton yard at the time of the fire contained a big part of the season's crop, which had been stacked there in the form of 500-pound bales, so the extinguishing of the fire was a vital matter to many of the valley growers.

Now a bale of cotton has been subjected to a heavy pressure; water will penetrate it like an inch or so, whereas kerosene does not ignite, and that's the explanation. After the fire is extinguished the bales are removed from the bale and the burned portions of the cotton stripped off. It is said that the use of kerosene has practically no detrimental effect on the cotton, and after it has been spread out and aired for a few days all odor of the oil disappears.—Scientific American.

An old negro was taken ill, and called in a physician of his race to prescribe for him. But the old man did not seem to be getting better, and finally a white doctor was summoned. Some after arriving the latter felt the darky's pulse for a moment, and then examined his tongue.

"Did your other doctor take your tongue?" he asked.

"I don't know, sah," the patient answered feebly. "I ain't missed anything but my watch as yit."—Liverpool Post.

SENATOR DAVIS IS AGAINST SESSION

Democratic Member of Legislature Takes Issue With Governor.

EXPLICIT REASONS

Calls Attention to Startling Situation in Democratic Ranks.

Special to The World.

SARASOTA, Fla., Nov. 24.—Doctors long himself absolutely against a special session of the legislature at this time, and pointing out some startling truths in connection with the Oklahoma political situation, State Senator Davis today addressed to Governor Williams a lengthy letter, which covers a different field than the criticism now being here and there made by the executive office from members of the law-making body.

"Senators of the legislature as they come and go are generally not called to work upon an old structure," says the senator, who is a Democrat. "Set down an fundamental or constructive changes while there is time for the betterment of the public."

Good For Lawyers.

He goes on to point out that 625,000 statutory changes were made by the last legislature of the several states. "This," he says, "is good for the lawyers, hard on the courts, and costly to the people."

Referring to the grandfather clause as the political reason for a special session being suggested, he calls it "a pretended party expediency" and says that a session for such a purpose would be a "grave error of state and consequently an error of party action."

Regarding the suffrage question, the senator says that he thinks it wisest to initiate a bill along that line and offer a measure the people would approve. He believes that if women had the vote in Oklahoma it would add the "lawyer of sound public morals to the body politic" and declares "one had just as well undertake to stop the revolutions of the earth as to think of defeating the eternal justice of this right."

Another significant paragraph of the letter follows:

Must Be Extraordinary.

"A governor can call a special session of the legislature, but no man in that office can withstand the resultant political shock unless it is clear that an 'extraordinary' condition does in fact exist, and such condition is not with a correct solution by the legislature."

He avers that an "extraordinary" condition does exist, with regard to the plight of the tenant farmers of the state, and says that they must be given relief by the party in power, or else these very conditions will produce and sweep into power the party who dures and claims to offer a solution of them, whether in truth or in fact they have or have not a solution.

"A literary test," he says, "will be met with as a two-edged sword as to white and black."

As to separate elections, he believes that it would accomplish nothing, except double the expense of elections in Oklahoma.

Governor Knows It.

The senator calls attention to the pertinent fact that "we were whipped to our knees at the last election with the negro eliminated."

He develops several paragraphs to the effect that party is a dangerous menace to the future of democracy. He declares that the seeds of Socialism are "being sown in the fertile field of 120,000 tenant farmers, increasing in number every day, with farm and chattel mortgage indebtedness rapidly increasing and on the other hand the state banks earning dividends of $5,000,000 in the last four years, and from 14 to 17 per cent of the capital invested."

He says that the same conditions that exist in Oklahoma today were the cause of the ascent of Populism in Kansas, when such men as John J. Ingalls went down to defeat.

"The term," he declares, "has been changed from Populism to Socialism and its geography has moved southward from Kansas to Oklahoma."

He says the only remedy for the situation is to bring at least $100,000,000 into the state to loan at fair rates. To do this Oklahoma must take the "federal tax off money, notes and mortgages, whether held by a resident or nonresident, and say to the world, 'Oklahoma invites and encourages your capital to come to this state. Your money is free; no tax to pay.'"

"Sure laws, as they exist today," he said in conclusion, "are of no avail."
